POSSESSION OBTAINED

TRANSFER OF VALUABLE REALTY TO WOODWARD & LOTHROP.

Large Increase in Boston House Proposed to Cost Nearly Half a Million.

A deed is to be placed on record in a day or two by which the property known as St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, on G street between 10th and 11th streets, will be transferred to Woodward & Lothrop, the proprietors of the Boston House. An agreement for the purchase of this property was made in June, 1890, and one of the conditions was that actual possession would not be given until the directors of the asylum could provide a new home for the institution. This has been done, and the orphan asylum is now in a fine new building that has been erected on the Edge-wood property, north of Eckington. It was also stipulated that the price agreed upon for the property, which reached the large aggregate of $450,000, could be paid in installments. Since the agent of the asylum directors, Mr. U. H. Ridenour of the R. O. Holtzman real estate office, received cash half of the purchase price, and upon the recording of the deed the entire amount will be paid.

Nearly a Square.

This new addition to the already large realty holdings of this firm in the square bounded by F, G, 10th and 11th streets, where their business establishment is located, places them in control of practically the entire square. The present building occupies 20,000 square feet and when the new part is erected covering the asylum property, the space on each floor will be increased by 20,000 square feet, thus giving a grand total of 50,000 square feet on each of the six stories of the old part and the seven and perhaps eight stories of the new portion of this extensive emporium of trade.

This purchase is notable on account of the new area secured in the heart of the business center of the city, and in the price paid, making the transaction one of great importance in the real estate market in this city. Having a frontage of 200 feet on G street and 100 feet both on 10th and 11th streets, the consideration for the 20,000 square feet was $22,500 per square foot.

The acquisition of this property marks only the beginning of an expenditure which is contemplated by Messrs. Woodward & Lothrop, for they propose the improvement of the additional ground by the erection of a structure which will be a part of the present extensive building. Next week the work is to be begun of removing the old asylum building, and when that is accomplished the foundations will be laid. Owing to the difference in the grade of the G street and F street fronts, it will be necessary to provide a sub-basement, so that the foundations will extend some distance below the surface. Upon them will rise the superstructure, the details of which have not as yet been decided upon. It will be seven stories in height—probably eight.

Expenditure of Half a Million.

The money needed for this great undertaking will come from local financial institutions, as the Washington Loan and Trust Company and the American Security and Trust Company have assisted in advancing the funds. It is estimated that the expenditure will represent about a half a million of dollars, and when the work is completed the entire establishment, merely from the standpoint of size, will be one of the great mercantile emporiums in this country.

It has grown with the growth of the city, and in this sense it is one of the typical in a substantial fashion the material development of the city during the past twenty years. The fact that the new establishment of Woodward & Lothrop ranks with the great commercial concerns of this country is a striking demonstration of the importance as well as magnitude of the business interests of the nation's capital.

John Randolph of Roanoke.

To the Editor of The Evening Star:

In your issue of the 7th instant, over the signature of Euphrasie B. Randolph, I am made the subject of a species of abuse and my veracity called into question. That kind of tirade does not disturb me.

The remarks in "Reminiscences" about John Randolph are not new. They are from history published in magazines and newspapers and widely circulated more than half a century ago, and now repeated for the perusal and instruction of the two generations of readers who have matured since the active career of the man of Roanoke closed.

Mr. Randolph was beyond all doubt at one time a boarder at the Franklin House, kept by William O'Neal. I have frequently seen him coming out of that hostelry immediately after breakfast day after day, and it is not within the probabilities that he would at that early hour have been there had he not been one of the regular boarders.

It is quite likely that he was at some time a guest at the old Union Hotel, corner of Bridge and Washington streets, Georgetown, as he was in Congress for many years, and some of the members lodged there during the sittings. But if the true original register of the Franklin could be produced—now an impossibility—the name of John Randolph would be found on its pages. There can be no reasonable doubt about that. Every one of the late old men who were boys in their teens in the second decade of the nineteenth century would if here be witness to the assertion of John Randolph's occupancy of rooms in the Franklin during some period of his congressional career here. I say here because he was in Congress when it met in Philadelphia, as I have heard a close old friend say that he went to Independence Hall, where the sessions were then held, to listen to his eloquence between the years 1844 and 1856 or '57.

Yes, to this day aristocracy and bitter sarcasm are a bane.

Most human beings are at the close of life anxious to do redeeming acts, and we may hope that the great I am will hear and notice our petitions if they are sincere and from the heart. And we have a good undoubted basis for hope that the true penitent will be heard and pardon extended.

The "good repentance" involves a forbidden indulgence. The arbiter of our destinies has said, "vengeance is mine; I will repay." It is broad to the dust, but deep to the soul. I am not alluding here to the Clay-Randolph hostile meeting. In that affair John Randolph acted nobly and in the highest degree commendable.

As the writer of the defense claims, no man is free from faults. No error is not confined to sex, age, nor condition. But few seek to reform until the shadow appears, and the effects of the injustice, humiliation and injury done cannot then be removed or avoided.

Instead of using the "Defense of John Randolph" for kindling or carpets, I shall preserve it as an evidence that revenge is a cultivated characteristic.

W. W. BIRTH.

Mrs. McKinley's Allment.

From the New York Herald.

The illness of Mrs. McKinley, due, as it is reported, to a "bone felon" of one of her fingers, is not in itself of a serious nature. Although the pain occasioned by the local inflammation is very great and the constitutional disturbance more or less severe, there is no danger of blood poisoning when prompt treatment is given by free incision of the affected part. As the latter has already been done by her physician, it is to be hoped that her recovery will be rapid and satisfactory.

Generally the disease is caused by a severe bruise, which induces the covering of the bone, causing deep-seated suppuration.

As the investing membrane of the bone is very firm and unyielding, the accumulation of the effusion underneath it has no ready vent, and when relief of pain and rest is not afforded by a deep cut either the bone itself is apt to be destroyed or the finger is rendered useless by subsequent destruction of its joints and tendons.

When the operation is delayed, the want of pluck in the patient the "matter" is likely to burrow under the deeper tissues of the palm and jeopardize the entire hand. Happily, in these times of improved anaesthesia there need be no pain felt by the knife, and, with the perfection of wound treatment, no fear of subsequent blood poisoning.

It is not at all unlikely that in a person with delicate hands a comparatively slight injury may cause a relatively grave case of mischief. Hence it is quite possible that the mere pressure on finger rings by heavy handshaking may have been the initiative cause in Mrs. McKinley's case.
